Stroke Is Fatal To Mrs. Ida E. Myers Friday Evening.

Mrs. Mary Catherine (Dewey) Miller, first cousin of Admiral Dewey, hero of Manila, and widow of the Rev. A. B. Miller, who died in January, 1923, passed away Friday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the home of Edward Shultz, 144 Hanover street. Mrs. Miller, a native of Easton, had been suffering from grip for a week. She was 74 years old.

The late Rev. Miller, to whom the Easton woman was married 53 years ago, was a graduate of Gettysburg College and the Lutheran Theological Seminary. He served pastorates at Liberty Valley, Blade, Hallam, New Franklin and Bedford, all in Pennsylvania.

In 1921, the Rev. and Mrs. Miller moved to Gettysburg, after the former retired from the ministry.

Mrs. Miller's only survivor is a niece, Miss Catherine Dewey, of Philadelphia.

Funeral services from the Shultz home at 3 o'clock, Monday afternoon, the Rev. Dr. A. E. Wagner, pastor of Christ Lutheran church, officiating. Interment in Evergreen cemetery.

Mrs. Ida E. Myers
From the effects of a third stroke of paralysis, suffered ten days ago, Mrs. Ida E. Myers, 54, wife of Clayton A. Myers, died at her home, 235 East Middle street, Friday evening at 8:20 o'clock.

Mrs. Myers, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Stambaugh, was born at Boiling Springs, Cumberland county, and for many years lived at Dillsburg. Twelve years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Myers moved to Gettysburg where they since resided.

The deceased is survived by her husband, two daughters, Mrs. Arthur W. Warman, East Middle street, and Mrs. John C. Shealer, East High street, and by one son, Charles A. Myers, of Philadelphia. SAFE COASTING AIM OF BURGESS

Town Executive Appeals For Volunteer Traffic Officers to Help Kiddies Enjoy Sport.

Burgess C. A. Heiges, this morning, issued an appeal to public spirited citizens and civic organizations to assist him in an effort to provide safe sled-coasting for the youngsters of Gettysburg.

"The youngsters of town have been using the Baltimore Hill, the Seminary Hill onto Springs avenue and the hill near the county home, for coasting purposes," said Mr. Heiges. "This is extremely dangerous in view of the heavy traffic at these places. Now I do not want to deprive these youngsters of any of the sports of winter, but I do want to make it safe for them. I would welcome volunteer traffic officers to divert traffic from these coasting hills, for an hour or two each evening, to give the youngsters an opportunity to coast, unmolested and without fear of being run down by automobiles. I believe that one of the civic organizations of town did similar work last year, when the coasting season arrived," continued the burgess, "and I understand it did much to alleviate the fears of mothers who were anxious about their children while out coasting," added Mr. Heiges.

Wants Safe Coasting
"The only plausible method to provide safe coasting for the youngsters of town is to have volunteer traffic officers to divert traffic from these coasting hills, for an hour or two each evening, to give the youngsters an opportunity to coast, unmolested and without fear of being run down by automobiles. I believe that one of the civic organizations of town did similar work last year, when the coasting season arrived," continued the burgess, "and I understand it did much to alleviate the fears of mothers who were anxious about their children while out coasting," added Mr. Heiges.

PASTOR LAUDS "ABE" LINCOLN AT S. OF V. MEET

Rev. E. J. Bowman Pays Tribute To Life And Character Of Emancipator.

An eloquent tribute to the life and character of Abraham Lincoln was paid by the Rev. Earl J. Bowman, pastor of St. James Lutheran church, speaking at the annual Lincoln's birthday celebration of the Gettysburg camp, Sons of Veterans, in the Corporal Skelly G. A. R. post, Friday evening.

A feature of the evening was the recitation of Lincoln's Gettysburg address by Charles Lackner, 7, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lackner, Chambersburg street. The manner and style in which the young boy delivered the great speech of the Emancipator proved a revelation to the large audience.

The Rev. Luther B. Hafer, Carlisle street, presided. The opening prayer was given by the Rev. W. C. Robinson, pastor of the Presbyterian church, and the Rev. W. D. E. Scott, Baltimore street, pronounced the benediction. Captain James Bodley, superintendent of the National cemetery, also spoke.

Large Crowd Attends
One hundred and fifty-six persons including twenty veterans of the Civil War, from all sections of the county, attended the function, which was said by members of the Sons of Veterans to have exceeded in enthusiasm and attendance any previous function. The Reformed church orchestra furnished music.

A sumptuous turkey dinner was served to the Sons of Veterans and their guests at the conclusion of the speaking.

The address of Rev. Mr. Bowman follows, in part:
"Lowell, in his 'Commencement Ode,' calls Lincoln the First American. Without doubt he is the most widely known and best loved American. His fame has spread to most remote parts of the world. This is true because he was a man of the people. There are many laudable qualities in his simple but great life."

The speaker emphasized three characteristics conspicuous in Lincoln's useful life: Perseverance, honesty, respect for law.

Surmounts Difficulties
"His perseverance," Mr. Bowman declared, "was shown in the marvelous way in which he overcame the obstacles of his youth. Living in most primitive conditions, in Kentucky and Indiana, with no advantages, little schooling, he became a master of clear, simple, but forceful English. The uncouth, country boy fought his way, surmounting every difficulty, from the log cabin to Congress, and finally to the White House, to the highest position his country could give him. His perseverance is a challenge to us who have so many advantages to use them aright."

"His honesty and integrity which gave him the name 'Honest Abe' are a model for us all. He always asked, 'Is it right?' All through his life he sought to know and do the right. He was loved and honored most by those who knew him best. The world loves an honest man."

"Lincoln preached and taught respect for law. His message for our day when America has won the unenviable position as the most lawless of the great nations of the earth is expressed in his plea that reverence for law and for our Constitution become the political religion of the nation."

Large Crowd Sees Brewster's Millions

A large crowd witnessed the first performance of "Brewster's Millions" a comedy in four acts, presented by the sophomore class of Gettysburg College in Brua Chapel, Friday evening.

Doctor Rugh Is Coming Feb. 24th For Rotary Club's Crippled Children's Clinic at Annie M. Warner Hospital

Services Of Noted Philadelphia Orthopedic Surgeon Obtained To Examine Handicapped Kiddies Of Adams County; 34 Listed.

The crippled children's clinic, under the auspices jointly of the Gettysburg Rotary Club and the Annie M. Warner Hospital, will be held at the hospital Wednesday, February 24, commencing at 7 o'clock in the morning, it is announced by the hospital staff.

Dr. Torrance G. Rugh, noted for his skill and success in straightening crooked bones and righting maimed bodies, will conduct the clinic. Doctor Rugh is professor of orthopedic surgery at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, and gives considerable time to conducting clinics of this nature throughout the East.

In announcing the date for the clinic, the hospital staff emphasized the fact every effort will be made to expedite the work and that it will likely require the full day. It is important, therefore, that the hospital staff be permitted to handle the clinic details without outside assistance, and no one will be permitted in the operating and examination rooms except members of the regular staff of surgeons, physicians and nurses, and Doctor Rugh.

Of the nearly 100 deformed or crippled children examined by members of the hospital staff of physicians and surgeons during the preliminary clinics at the institution the last few months, 34 have been notified to appear when Doctor Rugh comes, with excellent prospects of permanent relief for practically all of them and curing some entirely, providing the instructions of Doctor Rugh are followed implicitly.

All arrangements to bring the crippled children to the hospital and return them to their homes, in cases where they have no other means of transportation, will be made by members of the Rotary Club. A child will be assigned to each member of the Rotary Club to look after during the day of the clinic. Parents will be asked to accompany the children to the hospital, and they are requested to come ready to give written consent for Doctor Rugh to proceed with the work he advises in each individual case, so that there will be no delay.

Seminary Quartet To Sing On Monday

Support of the Chamber of Commerce has been given to the concert of the Seminary Quartet, on Monday evening at 8 o'clock at Brua Chapel. The concert will be the third annual appearance of the seminarians in a public recital here.

The Seminary Quartet is Gettysburg's foremost musical organization. The seminarians are said to have been heard in concerts by more people than any other Lutheran musical organization in the United States. Last year the quartet gave 75 concerts and sang several times for the radio.

If any crippled children have been missed who want to take part in the clinic, they are advised to get into communication with the Rev. Earl J. Bowman, pastor of St. James Lutheran church, Gettysburg, or Dr. W. E. Wolf, of Arendtsville, members of the Rotary Club's crippled children's committee, immediately and efforts will be made to give them a preliminary examination by members of the hospital staff before Doctor Rugh comes on the twenty-fourth of this month.

Mrs. Pinchot arrived a few minutes after one o'clock and was received by the reception committee, consisting of Mrs. M. A. Ziegler, Mrs. E. S. Swope, Miss Reba Adams and Mrs. Elsie Singmaster Lewars. Mrs. William King Sharpe, Chambersburg, was also a member of the reception committee. The gathering was marked by a spirit of enthusiasm. The luncheon started at 1:15 o'clock. Mrs. Sharpe outlined the policies and ambitions of the women's organizations and the close harmony that prevailed between the Adams county branch council and the state council. She spoke of the accomplishments of the state council and its political activities. She declared that the political activities committee was one of the most important in the state council. The speaker declared that the state council was rapidly being extended through the efforts of Miss Lola Walker, Pittsburgh, organization secretary.

Mrs. Sharpe took occasion to laud the local organization for its efforts during the past few years.

Mrs. Elsie Singmaster Lewars delivered a few introductory remarks on the Adams county council. She told of the work of the local organization in Adams county.

Mrs. Pinchot prefaced her address by expressing her delight in addressing an audience of Republican women and complimented the local organization.

Makes Four Classifications
Emphasizing the important part women should take in politics, Mrs. Pinchot classified the political group of a state into four parts.

Her first classification was that of those who believed in civic honesty and were willing to "take off their coats" and go to work, to do the real hard, detail work, looking towards success in any campaign. This group is "steady and patient," said Mrs. Pinchot.

Her second classification was that of

HOSPITAL WILL ACCEPT FIREMEN ENDOWMENT FUND

Directors Approve Of Offer; County Association Must Confirm Plan.

By unanimous vote, the directors of the Annie M. Warner Hospital, at their regular February meeting, Friday evening, accepted the proposal of the Adams County Firemen's Association to raise an endowment fund for the institution.

The directors voted to accept the association's offer after the proposition had been explained to them by D. C. Stallsmith, chairman of the committee named to meet with the board. Plans for the establishment at the hospital of either a maternity ward or a heart clinic, once broached by the firemen's association, were discarded. The addition of a maternity ward to the hospital would have been rejected by the hospital board on the ground that its maintenance and operation would be too costly at the present time, according to the firemen's committee.

Heart Clinic
The establishment of a heart clinic, it was also explained, might be only a temporary affair, with the rapid strides being made by medical science, and that in after years the clinic, placed as a memorial, would fall into disuse through changing conditions, according to the firemen's committee.

The offer of a permanent endowment, however, appealed to the hospital directors. It is the plan of the committee to have each of the 17 companies in the association hold picnics and suppers, the proceeds to be placed in the endowment fund, of which the hospital would have use only of the interest.

"While the endowment at first might not be large," one member of the firemen's committee explained, "in the course of five or ten years the total should be substantial."

Use Picnic Proceeds
It was said that the county association will be asked to contribute the proceeds of its annual picnic to the endowment fund, and each company asked to strive to its utmost to boost the total of the account. The proceeds of the annual picnic of the Adams County Firemen's Association are usually in the neighborhood of $1200. It has been suggested that the proceeds of the picnic every second or third year be specifically designated as going into the endowment fund.

The association's endowment plan, which must first receive the sanction of the county organization of firemen, was presented to the board of directors by D. C. Stallsmith, Gettysburg, chairman of the committee, consisting of one member from each of the 17 companies in the county, appointed to meet the board. "The board was very much pleased and gratified by our offer of an endowment fund," Mr. Stallsmith said today, "and I feel sure the county association will be as unanimous for the proposition as the board was to receive it."

S. G. Bigham, Biglerville, president of the board, presided at the Friday evening meeting of the hospital board.

The report of Miss Martha McKay, superintendent of the hospital, presented to the directors, follows:

Patients admitted, 52; discharged, 36; births, 2; deaths, 4; average number per day, 17; number remaining on last day of January, 20; radiographs, 64; laboratory examinations, 145; operations, 30; paracentesis, 5; return dressings, 14.

PROFIT TAKING CHECKS MARKET

(By Associated Press.)

New York, Feb. 13.—Heavy profit taking and bear selling checked the sharp upward movement in today's stock market. Settlement of the anthracite strike, the Senate's passage of the tax reduction bill and the raising of the General Motor dividend rate had resulted in a large accumulation of over-night buying orders. Later a number of weak spots developed and American Woolen common and preferred sagged to low levels for the year, and there was pronounced heaviness in a number of other issues. The closing was irregular.

JUNIOR PROM IS BRILLIANT FETE

More Than 150 Couples Attend Affair In Arabesque
Setting.

With the interior of the Hotel Gettysburg gymnasium transformed into a large Arab tent, and amid the scintillating strains of jazz and waltz music, the 1926 Junior Prom, outstanding social event of the year at Gettysburg College, was held Friday evening. When the dance-weary Juniors and Seniors and their fair guests left the Arabesque surroundings of the dance floor for the cold, snow-covered exterior in the "wee sma' hours" of this morning, all were agreed that, no matter what could have been added, the Prom of 1926 could not have been improved.

A color scheme in black and white was carried out in the decorations for the hotel gymnasium. Alternating black and white-striped material covered the ceiling and walls of the interior, and artificial plants to conform with the color scheme lent additional attraction to the place. Shaded lights lent enough glow to the scene to give the added feeling that the affair was being held in some desert chieftain's tent.

Attractively gowned guests of Junior and Seniors accompanied by immaculately clad escorts found plenty of inspiration from the scintillating strains of music as played by Tommy Christian's orchestra, to trip the "light fantastic" without effort.

Their differences over the favors for their guests patched up, Seniors and Juniors joined in the common band of pleasure to have a good time. The Seniors were agreed that the Prom was as good as, if not better than, the affair they staged last year for class of 1925.

Patrons and patronesses were Dr. and Mrs. Henry W. A. Hanson, Dr. and Mrs. John B. Zinn, Captain and Mrs. S. C. Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Wood, Gettysburg, and Mr. and Mrs. John F. Dapp, Harrisburg.

Holdup Men Are Hanged In Chicago

(By Associated Press.)
Chicago, Feb. 13.—All night efforts to save them having failed, Joe Holmes and Jack Woods, members of a band of five who killed Frank Rodkey, cashier, in the wild west holdup of the fashionable Drake hotel here last summer, were hanged in the county jail at 9:44 a. m. today.

Tracy Drake, one of the principal owners of the Drake hotel, was a spectator.

Until a few hours before the trap was sprung, efforts were made to obtain a stay of execution on the grounds that the men had become insane, the plea that had saved Russell Scott, convicted of killing a drug clerk.

The daring attempt to rob the Drake was made in broad daylight last July. Two of the five robbers were slain, two captured, and one escaped. Rewards of $7,000 for his capture are still standing. Loot approximating $10,000 has never been recovered.

FORMER POLICE HERE IN RAID

Corporal Kasparvich Leads Detail Into Hanover; Three Raided and Four Arrested.

Six state policemen of Troop E, Harrisburg, headed by Corporal Kasparvich, formerly located here, conducted a raid for contraband liquor in Hanover about 1 o'clock Friday afternoon. Three places were visited and four arrests were made. Altogether three pints of intoxicating liquor were seized, according to officials.

Those placed under arrest were, E. E. Beck, who conducts the American Hotel restaurant, Railroad street, charged with illegal sale of liquor; John Teal, 116 Chestnut street, charged with illegal possession and sale of liquor; Lester "Peck" Stahl, who conducts a pool room in Center Square, charged with illegal possession and sale, and Clayton Heffner, who rooms in the Colonial Hotel, charged with illegal sale.

Two pints of booze were found at the Teal place and one pint at the Stahl rooms, said police. Both the pool room and apartment above were searched. The raiders also swept down upon the American Hotel restaurant but found no liquor there. Heffner was arrested at the General cigar factory where he is employed as a cigar maker.

The evidence of sale had been secured by Troopers Manley and Solt who were visitors in Hanover last week and allege they bought liquor from the men arrested.

Teal waived a hearing, but failed to get bail to the amount of $1,000 for his appearance in court. Stahl gave bail in the amount of $1,000 for a hearing before Justice of the Peace A. H. Shettle, North York, next Friday, February 19. Teal and Heffner were taken to York by the officers. Beck was seeking bail at last reports.

Before going to Hanover the state policemen arrested Simon Sipple at York on charges of illegal sale of liquor also on evidence secured by troopers previously, according to the officers.

Brenizer Funeral Services Are Held

Funeral services for Mrs. Sarah M. Brenizer, who died Tuesday, were held Friday afternoon from the Heidersburg Lutheran church. The Rev. J. Harold Little, her pastor, assisted by the Rev. Henry Sternat, officiated. Interment was at Heidersburg.

Six grandsons were pallbearers. They were Arthur Brenizer, Clarence and Lloyd Eckert, Edner Brenizer, George Strickler and Walter Fickel.

the group which "does not care more or less about clean government." She said this group "is willing to remain lukewarm." They prefer to stay at home, sacrifice their vote, rather than extend an effort towards the elimination of unclean politics.

"If a cause is worth fighting for, it is worth being beaten for," declared the wife of the state's chief executive. "Their efforts are so much empty sham," she added.

"Philadelphia," said Mrs. Pinchot, "is controlled by the worst political machine in the country. The good people in a large measure remain away from the polls. They do not vote. The gang there is in the minority, and if the good people went to the polls and cast their vote, as they should, the election would be swung in the right direction. The city is dominated and exploited by the most corrupt political machine known, worse today than at any other time. Uncast votes keep the machine in power and the gang alive."

The third classification was that group who had not the faintest intimation or interest in the ideals of the party. "They carry out the orders of the bosses. They are blind in spirit, yet loyal to the gang leaders. They recognize no responsibility and are disinterested," said Mrs. Pinchot.

"I have heard one very prominent woman, an attractive woman, with a very pleasant personality, a sacrifice to the bosses," declare that she personally would vote for the devil if he were on the Republican ticket," the speaker asserted.

Mrs. Pinchot declared she had always been a suffragist and wanted to see the women of the country take their place in the political field.

Mrs. Pinchot's fourth classification related to the "power behind the throne." "This is the invisible government," she said, "and they seek to gain control of machine government."

Mrs. Pinchot classified in this group bootleggers, state contractors, the "Leslies of Pittsburgh," Vares of Philadelphia and others. "They grow rich through politics," declared Mrs. Pinchot. "Even now they are seeking to reap a profit out of the Sasquehanna, as will make their former depredations look like 'chicken feed.'"

Closing her remarks, Mrs. Pinchot referred to the reasons why Governor Pinchot called the extra session of the legislature. "Conditions warranted it," she said.

Other topics touched by Mrs. Pinchot included election reforms, law enforcement, alcoholic permits, the coal strike and giant power.

WOOD ADDRESSES LEAGUE MEETING

College Coach Tells of Work
Here; Lincoln Day Program
Is Rendered in Hanover.

A Lincoln program was presented at the meeting of the Hanover Women's League of Gettysburg College, which was held in the Hanover Y. W. C. A. auditorium Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The hall had been decorated with flags, ferns and other potted plants. An interesting talk was given by W. W. Wood, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Gettysburg College.

As an opening selection, "America" was sung by the group, with Mrs. J. Curvin Bender, Hanover, presiding at the piano, after which Mrs. O. C. Dean led in prayer. A piano solo was rendered by Miss Virginia Moul. Mrs. Horace D. Becker then read a sketch of Lincoln's life after which Mrs. C. W. Plowman, president of the Hanover league, introduced the speaker, Mr. Wood.

He spoke of his work among the boys at Gettysburg College and of how a Y. M. C. A. secretary is able to be of assistance to students. He stated that the Y. M. C. A. here during the past year raised $1500 to be sent to Andhra College, India, pointing out that by giving toward Christian education the students become more interested in the Christian life. The Y. M. C. A. center as a means of Christian work, he said, is a monument to the women of the league which will stand when the pyramids of the Sahara desert have passed away. He closed his address with these words, "I can do all things through Him who strengthened me." The Rev. O. C. Dean, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church in Hanover, gave a brief talk upon morning after which Mrs. William H. Morning favored the audience with several vocal solos. Refreshments were served by a committee of which Mrs. Frank E. Cremer was chairman. 38 members and guests were present.

vide ample coasting privileges for the youngsters," said the burgess, "and at the same time afford some degree of safety for them, would be to have temporary 'traffic officers' stationed at these coasting hills, and divert traffic in some other direction for an hour or two each evening, while the youngsters are given an opportunity to coast. The Rotary or Lions Club, or the Boy Scouts volunteered for this work last year, I understand," said Burgess Heiges, "and if some arrangement could be made this year, I believe it would aid considerably."

The burgess said he would welcome and appreciate volunteers to assist him in providing this means of recreation for the youngsters of town. He was especially anxious to start the movement Monday, if he could secure enough men or older boys to assist in directing traffic at these hills.

Baltimore Hill, Seminary Ridge on to Springs avenue and the hill at the county home are the three hills in question. The appeal is made to public spirited men of town or older boys, to notify the burgess of their willingness to direct traffic at these points for an hour or two each evening, while the kiddies enjoy the sport of coasting.

ANTHRACITE TO START MOVING TO MARKET SHORTLY

Should Be No Increase In Price, Governor
Pinchot Says

(By Associated Press.)
Philadelphia, Feb. 13.—Anthracite will be moving to market Wednesday or Thursday of next week as a result of the strike settlement.

It will move slowly at first and will be spread very thinly in order to cover as many urgent demands as possible. Each day the production will increase and the peak probably will not be reached before the end of the month.

The day the miners will be permitted to produce coal depends upon when the union ratifies the agreement reached here yesterday. The tri-district convention will meet Tuesday in Scranton for the purpose of ratifying the pact; whether it will take one or two days depends upon the delegates. The men will return to work the morning after the ratification.

Mines In Good Order
The mines generally are in good condition due to the 8,000 maintenance men who were permitted under agreement to remain at work. Some mines will be short-handed the first few days because of their forces are scattered and others will not be able to employ all who apply, owing to conditions within the workings.

The first sign of resumption was seen today among the railroads which are clearing sidings of snow and moving cars towards the mines.

Price Same, Pinchot
Harrisburg, Feb. 13.—Settlement of the anthracite strike should not result in increased coal prices, Governor Pinchot declared in a statement today.

"This strike has been the most costly in the history of the operators and miners," the governor said. "Now that it is settled it is highly important that its cost shall not be passed on to the public as has been done so often before."

"The men are going back to work at the old wages. There is nothing in the terms of settlement to justify an increase in the price of anthracite. Any attempts to settle such an increase on consumers already overburdened would be nothing short of extortion."

LAND SOLD FOR $3.05 AN ACRE

Kane.—Purchase of a tract of land by the government which eventually is expected to comprise one million acres in McKean, Forest, Warren and Elk counties is being made by officials at a cost of $3.05 per acre, L. I. Bishop, supervisor of the Allegheny National Forest, has announced.

"The first tract offered for sale to the United States," he said, "was an area of 32,000 acres of land from which the timber had been cut. The tract was acquired at a price of $2.50 an acre. However, the average price of the 187,000 acres thus far approved for purchase has been at $3.05 an acre or more than $570,000. The price is fixed in accordance with the condition of the land, whether or not it has been damaged by forest fire and whether or not the land carries advanced timber growth."

When the music died in a plain, the dancers stood, expectant of the customary encore. The lights, which had been dimmed, however, and a roll of the drums announced an unexpected interruption. From the balcony a voice called, "Mademoiselle de Mademoiselle!" All who were in the room glanced up, curiously, at the club house host, who stood at the rail, leaning forward over the dance floor. "I am desolate, my friends," the functionary called out, "before the necessity I must urge upon you all. I must ask you sorrowfully to make your departures from my hospitalities as soon as may be convenient for you. The mist, of which you kindly have taken note as you so justly came to our club house earlier in the evening, has risen fast and heavily. Soon your car lamps will be of no use to you. Even now you must go down very carefully,

A woman who had become careless breezed up to Brandon and boldly commanded him to take her from the floor.

There are any of you whose humor it is to remain with us until daylight, when the sun will chase the fog away. I assure you of my welcome. Those of you who feel it your duty to descend before the night has passed, must go at once and very, very cautiously. In a little while it will be too late."

There was an instant babel of voices, and the rustle of those who, for their various reasons, must attempt the descent rather than remain at La Turbie during the night. Brandon, who had risen from his table, watched Joanna and Kenilworth. He saw that both of them turned immediately toward the foyer where Joanna had left her wrap. Then he slipped out the door and went to the big car in which Antoine awaited.

"As I expected," he said to the Monseigneur, "she will not remain. Be ready to pull out when they approach their car. We want not more than two or three cars between us."

When Kenilworth and Joanna came out, many of the cars in the yard had already vanished in the fog, their horns echoing up from the road monotonously. An attendant was ordering departures, insisting upon an interval of two minutes between them. Brandon called until Joanna, her wrap held close about her, her mask in her hand now, had climbed into the seat beside Kenilworth. Then he touched Antoine's arm, and at the next signal from the starter, the big car slid away.

"The smaller car Kenilworth remarked grimly: 'It'll be a test of nerve, but we'll make it if anyone does.' The girl seemed to detect a note of dejection in his tone. She slipped her hand under his arm.

"I'm sorry, Roddy," she said. "You were wonderful, and I am convinced enough to think you meant all that you said. But you just didn't sweep me off my feet as I thought you might. I suppose there must be something old-fashioned about me after all. Your arms are awfully comforting, my dear, but I couldn't have the feeling that the thorns would just have to grow on them. I know you think I've treated you rotten, but I couldn't help it. I feel better, for it, too. I'm sure of myself, anyway."

"I don't know," he said, "but what you've got the right idea at that. Better than mine. I almost asked you to marry me, and that's wholly against my principles." "I'm glad you didn't," she returned. "I'm afraid I might have given in to that."

The starter appeared at their running board and asked them to proceed. They crept, noiselessly, out of the parking yard. Until they came to the first turn, some fifty yards away, the flickering lights from the club house aided them. Then, when they had swerved sharply to the left they were wrapped in wet, almost impenetrable obscurity. Ahead they would see only the faint glimmer of their own headlights.

Twice they bumped into cars stalled at the inner side of the road. Each time they were called out by members of a party going back about—even women in fragile slippers and delicate gowns already soggy from the damp—rather than fight the descent any longer.

The red car nosing downward at a snail's pace, struck a stump. "It was foolish of me to let you attempt to go down," Joanna declared. "Before we are too far away we must walk back. The car will be as safe at the side of the road as are the others being abandoned."

"If we have to walk," Kenilworth replied firmly, "it will be straight ahead. I'll get you down if I have to carry you."

"But it's utter folly!" she protested. At that moment another group, two women and a man, stumbled by them, feeling their way back to the summit. "See," she exclaimed, "there are men who have given it up. We can walk back, dry out and wait for daylight. People below will understand."

He stubbornly negotiated another corner. When the car was crawling again he spoke, grimly: "There isn't enough charity in the whole world—in the part of it you and I inhabit—to make room for any sort of decent understanding of how a pretty woman might be caught and remain till daylight on La Turbie. You can stand a mysterious escapade in the night with Prince Michael, but not with me. In the mist at a mountain-top club house where you have to wear a mask to save your face, some could; with some it wouldn't matter; you couldn't and you count."

She bit her lip, and was silent. With a petulant gesture she brushed away the moisture that hung in great, glinting beads on her eyelashes. Suddenly she was startled by a light that appeared weirdly in the middle of the road almost at their front wheels, wavering slowly to the right and left.

"Somebody smashed, I suppose," Kenilworth muttered, and jamming in his brakes, brought the car to a stop. Heavy, forbidding faces emerged from the fog on either side of them. Joanna cried out, Kenilworth with an oath, lunged across at the head of a man who reached in to her but his arms were seized in an iron grip and twisted dexterously behind him. A guttural voice, speaking a mixture of Monseigneur and French, commanded:

"Monsieur and Mademoiselle will be good enough to step from the car!"

"Like —!" Kenilworth exclaimed, and struggled, but the grip on his arms left him powerless. The lantern was brought closer. By its pale light they saw that a dozen men surrounded the car and that firearms gleamed dully in their hands.

After her first cry of alarm Joanna sat rigid. Something of her fright shone in her eyes, and Kenilworth was conscious that her face was pale. Otherwise she gave no sign. The gruff voice of the leader of the evil crew was heard again:

"It was ordered that you both descend. We have not great patience. The mademoiselle need not fear."

Kenilworth advised Joanna to step out quietly. "We must go through it, I suppose," he grumbled. "They probably will rob us with a thousand pardons and then politely let us go. These mountain brigands are thorough gentlemen as a rule."

The one who had been holding onto Joanna's wrists released them when she was in the road. She ran around the car to Kenilworth's side and from this position glared defiantly at the footpads who surrounded them. One of them caught the red sparkle of the enormous ruby that lay against her throat, from which her wrap had fallen. She instinctively flung up her hand to cover it. The bandit smiled and bowed gallantly. "A pretty thing, Mademoiselle," he said in the native patois. "Mademoiselle's neck does not require such an ornament, however."

Kenilworth cursed at him, which only brought another ironic bow. The men closed in around the pair and they were ordered to walk with them. They were marched off the road past a hut which Kenilworth recognized as the one before which the big car ahead of them for the first portion of their ascent, had stopped and dropped them. Behind the hut they entered a cluster of pine trees and then crossed an open space of soggy bush stub. A low barn-like building loomed out of the mist before them, and they were ushered through a narrow door.

Inside the building was a startling scene. In the dim light shed by a dozen lanterns placed about the earthen floor they saw half a dozen men and women whose costumes and dominoes proved them to have been revelers at the club house, lined up against the wall, the men standing stiffly at one side, their hands bound behind them, women in an excited group. Armed ruffians guarded the women at one side, and the sullen men at the other. Kenilworth was ordered to take his place among the men. For a brief moment he gave a sign of attempting flight, but Joanna murmured a reassuring word to him and without awaiting the command from their captors, moved over to join the group of women.

As Kenilworth had prophesied, the bandits robbed their victims with profuse apologies uttered in their guttural tones. They seemed, however, to be strangely inefficient in their plundering. The man whose hands explored Kenilworth's pockets did not discover his wallet, in which was a sizeable sheaf of bank notes, nor his platinum and diamond studded watch in the watch pocket beneath his waistcoat. A few gold louis, and an English pound note in his change pocket was confiscated. His pearl dress studs were not noted. Curiously, he observed that the other men, relieving the other men of obvious valuables, ignored costly pearl studs. On the lapel of one victim, a tiny decoration built around a huge diamond, was unnoticed.

The same inconspicuous carelessness prevailed at the plundering of the women. Their fingers brushed lightly over gleaming throats; they begged a pardon for every jewel of which they took only those that sparkled flagrantly. A pretty young woman—a very pretty young one with the small, angular face and smooth eyelids of an early madonna, dropped to her knees hysterically when a rough hand reached to a sapphire pendant which hung deep on a bare chest from which, in her excitement, she had almost torn the already scant reach of her gown.

Please, said the bandit to the bandit, "do not take my necklace. It is of small value. I have hidden diamonds that I will give you. My necklace is a reminder of my husband."

The evil fellow gave her his fingers and helped her to her feet. Then he bowed with a comic opera sweep of his wide brimmed hat. "I would not disturb the gift that reminds such a charming lady of something she should not forget," he said. Joanna, who was standing near, glanced quickly at the common, vulgar fellow, whose breath was strong with garlic and whose hands were gross and awkward. Then she looked at the girl, and shuddered a little.

The brigand who appeared to be the leader of the robbing company, the one whose voice was particularly gruff, stepped into the middle of the floor and announced: "We are most sad to interfere with such plans as the messieurs and mesdames have made for their return to the more comfortable threshold of their homes below, but there are circumstances which may not be avoided. It becomes a necessity to invite the gentlemen to remain within the hospitality of this isolated barn which we have borrowed for the evening. The ladies will be returned to the club house, where they may be so happy as to find other partners for the merry dances of the waning night. You will be reunited with the morrow, doubtlessly. When the ladies are deposited at the club house we shall leave you. Messieurs the police will find us well disappeared by the time you gentlemen cease your writhing and find your way to the cities below."

The men against the wall stirred and swore, but firearms menaced them. Some of the women blanched at the prospect of their doings of the night becoming wildly reported tid bits for the spicy enjoyments of sensation mongers along the Riviera. The pretty girl who had protected the sovereign of her husband shrieked. An amused and ironical smile formed about the plebeian mouth of the bandit who had sensed her predicament—her sudden thought of the consequences of being detected by that same husband in her clandestine visit with another man than he to the club house that is out of conventional bounds. Despite all protests the women were herded out the barn, escorted across the soggy open space, through the pines, and onto the road. There they were instructed to climb into a big gray car Joanna thought she recognized it as the one they had passed on the road, but was not sure. A silent figure sat at the wheel: one who knew every trick of the road and picked his way surely through the mist to the final turn which revealed the dim lights of the club house just ahead. Here the car stopped and the women were ordered to descend and proceed alone to the club house. "The telephone wires have been cut," the man who had driven the car said to them when they were all in the road: "you may be prepared to wait until the mist lifts or your escorts find their way below and send for you."

Gettysburg's Maroon and White quintet took a bad trouncing last night at York to the tune of 44-11. The York contenders completely outclassed the battlefield boys the game never being in doubt. York proved that they are dangerous contenders for the flag by administering the worst licking the local club has met this year.

Gettysburg scored first on a foul by Buohl. York soon scored on a field goal by Dehoff and then swept into a commanding lead when the York quintet commenced to locate the basket. Gettysburg failed to score a field goal in the first twenty minutes of play, the York squad netting eight double-deckers. York succeeded in caging five out of seven throws from the foul line while Gettysburg made four out of nine. The half ended 21-4.

The second half was practically the same as the first. Gettysburg managed to net three field goals while York added eight. Utz netted two from the field and Weikert one during this period. York shot seven out of thirteen tries and Gettysburg one out of five from the foul line in the last twenty minutes of play.

Dehoff and Klinedinst were easily the stars for the York quintet with 15 points each. Weikert played good ball for Gettysburg with Utz a close second.

This defeat marked the varsity's thirteenth in eighteen starts. The high school team failed to measure up to the brand of ball they played last Saturday but hope to stage a comeback tonight when they meet Lock Haven on the hotel floor.

Harrisburg Tech took an undisputed hold on first place last night when they easily defeated Williamsport 42-24. Sunbury sprung a big surprise on Lancaster by outplaying them at all stages of the game and winning 30-25. The game was played on Lancaster's court. Steelton had an easy time with Lock Haven winning 39-12.

Tonight's battle between Reading and Tech at Reading will be the most important league tilt of the season. Should Tech win tonight the Maroons are practically assured of another championship. However, Reading is slightly the favorite and this battle promises to be the hardest fought of the season. Gettysburg will have its hands full with Lock Haven and an interesting game should result. The game between Sunbury and Steelton at Sunbury is a toss-up. Both teams are playing good ball and a close battle is expected. Lancaster's exhibition last night indicates that Lebanon will win but this game is in doubt like all the rest.

YORK LOSES TO M'SHERRYSTOWN

Teams to Play Third Game of Series Monday; Each Holds One Victory.

The McSherrystown St. Mary's basketball team won from the St. Mary's Boys' club of York in an exceptionally fast and hard fought battle at McSherrystown Thursday night. The score was 31 to 25. This was the second game between these two teams this season, the first having been played in York about a month ago, when the York team won. The third game of the St. Mary's series will be played in York Monday night.

The Yorkers were careless in their form of play, and the McSherrystown players took advantage of every mistake that turned up. The game was marked by several fast plays by each team. The York St. Mary's squad was the aggressor for most of the game, and the result was not decided until the final minute of play when the McSherrystown cagers scored two field goals in rapid succession. The score was deadlocked at 22 with about six minutes to go, when McSherrystown began to fight for the lead.

Smith was the high scorer for McSherrystown, caging seven field goals and one foul. Larkin and F. Noel led their team, the former in scoring and the latter in his floor work. The score:

God--In The Romance of Life

A Valentine Day Sermon—Sunday 7:00 P. M.

"Old Bishop Valentine! Thou comest attended with thousands and ten thousands of little loves and the air is brushed with the hiss of rustling wings. This is the day on which those charming little missives, clept Valentines cross and intercross each other at every street and turning. The postman sinks beneath a load of delicate embarrassments not his own."—Chas. Lamb, Essays of Elia.

The Courts of the Lord—10:30 A. M. Are the highways of Zion in your heart? Are you drinking of the springs? Finding God? Renewed in His strength for service? Is the Church an organ of privilege or an instrument of service—the avenue through which a man may serve the world's needs?

THE COAL STRIKE

The coal strike is over. Peace reigns once more in the anthracite fields. 158,000 men return to work.
Food, fuel, clothing and the luxuries of life will once more be theirs and their families'. The news came as a great relief to Gettysburg householders who have been forced to change their favorite grade of coal.

After five months and 12 days of idleness the great wheels of hard coal production will turn again. Scranton, Wilkes-Barre, Hazleton and other large coal mining communities are rejoicing. It is like the Yuletide season for those sturdy inhabitants.

The operators and miners were steadfast. That one side conceded a point or two is of little consequence in the news that the hard coal fields will return to work. Families will not have to "bootleg" coal. Bread lines will be dispensed with. Food funds will be disbursed rapidly, the remainder returned to generous donors or placed in charitable hands for disbursements to others.

In this God-given land of freedom, one finds a certain amount of re-joicement in the peace agreement.
One is inclined to overlook the essential details, because, after all, the biggest thing in life is peace, happiness and peace of mind, body and soul. The peace that comes to the soul is an everlasting peace, but the peace in this lifetime is of worldly affairs and we are wont to shout with glee for those men who earn a livelihood under the surface of the soil, because their five-months period of idleness is over.

The strike was unmarred with labor troubles. Both sides contented themselves with laying their differences in the hands of a chosen few.

And now that all is over, it is not amiss to reflect and perhaps reminisce upon the past. Adams county is indeed fortunate in weathering periods of depression, unmarred by strikes and the like. Yet, even we, many miles from the scene of dispute, found ourselves sharing, in a measure, the inconveniences growing out of the strike.

We can go back just a few days when the world was shouting, "peace on earth, good will to all men."

WINTER'S JEWELRY

Now winter hems us in with snow and ice

And builds her rugged barriers to play, Blusters and roars about us through the day,

Fashions in crystal many a strange device,

Festoons of jewels, perfect and precise,

To deck the humblest home, as if
to say:

"These eaves shall wear my diamonds without pay.

I'll shape a necklace past a monarch's price."

So winter crowns the houses of the poor

And decks with brilliant gems their little eaves,

Hangs a great crest above the narrow door,

Patterns of beauty on each window
weaves,

And with the morning all the children stare

Counting with joy the jewels flashing there.

ON THE SQUARE

the success and growth of any business depends on satisfied customers; we'd rather do one thing exactly right than half a dozen things half right; mistakes are inevitable and always remember that there are two sides to every question; get both; be fair and get the facts; be decent. We will be fair, considerable and generous. If you have any doubts just equip your laundry with a Queen Electric Washing Machine. Wife will appreciate its added convenience.

One Dial sets them all—

The Grebe Synchronphase offers the first Flexible Unit Control

TWO or all three dials may be set by rotating one—or each dial may be adjusted separately. Thus, in the Synchronphase you have, at your option, a receiver of one, two or three-dial control. It means ease and speed in accurate tuning, not enjoyed by owners of other receivers.

This is another one of the many forward steps in radio development made by Grebe.

The now famous Grebe Binocular Coils and S-L-F Condensers which give extreme "Selective Sensitivity", and the new Grebe Low-Wave Extension Circuits, place the Synchronphase at the forefront of radio receivers.

Ask for a demonstration of the many exclusive Grebe features; then compare
